Association Monitoring Report
Period 2015-2019
Santos is a bold, dynamic and entrepreneurial city in many aspects that range from cultural expression to business generation. Having a solid history of pioneerism, Santos was built around its port—the largest in Latin America—and 2015, it was the first Brazilian city to be included in UNESCO’s selective Creative Cities Network, UCCN, under the Film category.

Santos is one of the oldest cities in Brazil and was ranked among the top ten Film proportional audiences in the country. It has served as settings for hundreds of both national and international productions, which have been drawn here because of its diversity of landscape, which brings together history, urbanity and nature, not to mention the extensive infrastructure in services it has.

Santos has always had as its routine to welcome, through its port, the first African, European, Japanese and Arabic immigrants to arrive in the country, all ethnic groups that contributed to the formation of the miscegenation of the Brazilian people. Home of the international Santos Football Club, team that revealed to the world, soccer stars such as Pelé and Neymar.

Due to its ongoing development, the city has been a reference on social inclusion actions and has gained both national and international recognition. It was featured in the 3rd Sustainable Cities Award, this year, held by the Sustainable Cities Program and Oxfam - Brazil, in association with the Brazilian Association of Cities and National Front of Mayors, having been awarded the third position in the of “Accessibility” and “Reduction of Economic Inequality” categories. The latter praised the work that was carried out by Santos local government at the nine Creative Villages in the city, a pool of multidisciplinary venues that offer leisure and other cultural activities and professional qualification training for the population who live in areas considered as socially vulnerable, by using the creative economy concept as an element for change.

Santos, which is only 43 miles far from São Paulo, the largest Brazilian economic metropolis, will host the annual UNESCO Meeting on Creative Cities, which will be held for the first time in the region of Latin America and the Caribbean, in order to debate on this progress and to promote the exchange of experiences to innovate, moving even further in the formulation of public policies and partnerships—as well as business generation. The event will take place from July 13-17, 2020, and will discuss the theme ‘Creativity, the Road to Equality’.

Creativity can be expressed in the local daily life not only in film, but also in the most diverse branches of creative economy, encouraged by the public power. Actions that include the revitalization of the Historical City Center as a reference neighborhood for innovative and creative activities, fostered by tax reduction for entrepreneurs in the segment, generating income and stimulating social transformation through productive activities.

Projects in the central neighborhood also include gastronomic and pop culture festivals, such as the Geek Festival, Santos Café and the Immigration Festival, as well as the installation of a technology hub by the means of the construction of a building that will house Santos Technological Park, a place for the incubation of startups and for discussion of digital innovations that facilitate everyday life.

Opened by the City Hall in 2017, 2018 and 2019, respectively, Vila Progresso, Vila Nova and Penha Creative Villages are equipped with multipurpose classrooms, recreation areas, industrial kitchen, sports court and movie theaters (one per village), with a capacity of 70 seats each, being an important, if not the only, access for the poor population to the movie exhibition. On weekends, there are free movie sessions, for all age groups, providing leisure and knowledge.

Also, at the Creative Villages we offer regular classes of dance, music, drama and handicraft, in addition to specific training in order to create job opportunities and increase income in the gastronomy area, through a partnership with the State Government and Sebrae.

960 places have been offered in more than 20 courses since 2017.
It contributes to the following Sustainable Development Goals:
The Agency of Development, created by Santos Local Government in 2005, awakened the city to its vocation as a film set. But it was only in 2007 that Santos was nationally recognized for its beautiful scenery. Among other productions, Santos was the setting for TV miniseries such as JK and Um Só Coração, the soap operas Terra Nostra, Sassaricando and Ciranda de Pedra, and the movie features Querô, Cidade de Plástico City and Reflexões de Liquidificador. One of the most attractive factors for these productions was the revitalization of the Historical City Center, influenced by the Tax Incentive Act, which brought to light buildings with more than a century of existence.

We are currently working on new legislation to facilitate and speed up filming permits, by writing a complete guide for executive production, also updating rental costs of locations, and registering suppliers and services to encourage and support new productions. The returns to the city are numerous. They range from publicizing the city in productions that are aired not only nationally but internationally, to providing positive impact on the local economy. 522 film productions were made between 2008 and 2019, which generated an estimate revenue of R$ 7 million in services in the city, including hotels, restaurants, equipment and vehicle rental and other sectors.

4.3 Querô Institute - assignment of public venue

In July 2018, an area equipped with a movie theater was donated by Santos Municipality to the Querô Institute. The Institute is part of the Creative Village of Vila Nova, a recent public facility, located in a region of great social vulnerability.

Querô Institute is a Civil Society Organization of Public Interest (OSCIP, in Portuguese) founded in 2004, which uses audiovisual elements as a tool to encourage talents, promote cultural inclusion, share values, develop entrepreneurship and give a voice to the young population who live under high social risk. With their workshops, they promote cultural inclusion, by offering classes on citizenship, humanism and developing entrepreneurship. That enables young people to have more self-awareness and to be participative. The program has already received 50 national and international awards, rewarding not only the institution but also the productions made during the workshops.

The Institute, which also has a partnership with the private sector and other municipalities around the Metropolitan Region of Baixada Santista (which include Santos, São Vicente, Praia Grande, Cubatão, Bertioga, Guarujá, Mongaguá, Itanhaém and Peruíbe), and manages the following projects:

Querô Workshops - Workshops on audiovisual production, entrepreneurship and citizenship. 40 students are selected every year for the full two-year educational program. After the two-year training, these young students move to “Produtora Escola”, the institution continuous education project, in which they are invited to work as audiovisual professionals, seeking insertion in the job market. The process is carried out by Querô Films producer and other partners of the Institute.

Querô at School - Young people who took the program bring the audiovisual segment to public schools.

Querô Community - This Institution works with the low-income communities residents.

It contributes to the following Sustainable Development Goals:

4.4 Arte no Dique Institute

renovation of support

A Program focused on the cultural and social inclusion of populations in vulnerable areas through culture, especially music, with the promotion of international exchanges. It is a partnership between the NGO, the private sector, the federal government and the City of Santos.

Arte no Dique aims at stimulating culture through different artistic languages, emphasizing the sense of community and provoking the creative expression of children and young people. All factors mentioned above are just a few of the objectives of the renovation of the Development Agreement between Santos City Hall and the Arte no Dique Institute, which was signed in November 2019.

This partnership establishes the support from the Local Department of Culture (Secult) for the increase on the number of children and young people to be attended in cultural courses and workshops, in addition to the maintenance of the Plínio Marcos Popular School of Art and Culture, which operates at the entity’s headquarters.
The audiovisual workshops (internet, film, games and photography), capoeira, choir singing, customization, sustainability, dance, IT, percussion, drama and guitar workshops will serve about 300 people, 100 more than in the previous period.

The Plínio Marcos Popular School of Art and Culture will also increase service to residents of Vila Gilda and surroundings, by offering workshops on entrepreneurship, gastronomy, painting, crochet and sustainable arts, as well as developing citizenship and culture actions in a partnership with the Federal University of Rio de Janeiro. São Paulo (UNIFESP) and Psychosocial Support Center (Naps), a social welfare service.

THE INSTITUTE
The Arte no Dique develops socio-cultural work with the population of Dique da Vila Gilda, located in the Northwest Zone of Santos, with around 26 thousand inhabitants. The entity proposes to carry out actions, workshops and vocational courses, driven by principles of social inclusion, research and appreciation of local culture.

The project has already offered exchange opportunities for young Santistas in Italy, France and Spain.

In 2019, the Institute served 1,425 people, in courses from the audiovisual segment alone. There were 38,995 people from all areas.

It contributes to reach the following Sustainable Development Goals:

4.5 1st Contest of Support to short film projects

Aiming to increase the number of audiovisual productions in Santos and boost the local economy, the City Government launched the 1st Contest to Support Cultural Projects and Short length movies, in November 2019. In 2020, the local government will offer R$ 300,000 to be shared among five projects, previously selected in the contest (R$ 60,000 each).

Productions should last no longer than 25 minutes and be works of fiction. Participants must be Santos residents, or if companies, have their headquarters or non-profit entities located in the city. As a way of stimulating local economy, 70% of all production contracts should be made with companies from Santos.

It contributes to reach the following Sustainable Development Goals:

4.6 It’s Short Day today!

Aiming at the formation of the public and the access to the cinematic art, Santos City Hall has six public movie theaters, four of them in socially vulnerable regions, reaching an annual average of 20,000 people. The program includes national, international and mainly regional films from various genres. Among the initiatives is the Today is Short Day project. Launched in June 2019, the project aims to stimulate the region’s film production and expand democratic access to cinema.

Every last Sunday of each month, initially at Cine Arte Posto 4 (28-year-old public room), 3 free sessions are held with short films produced in the region and award-winning productions at international festivals. Next year the project should be extended to the other 5 public rooms in the city.

With the purpose of generating indexes regarding the growth of the creative economy sector in Santos, the Local Bureau of Economic Innovation and ESAMC – Santos University, signed a memorandum of understanding, in September 2019, for the creation of the Creative Economy Observatory.

This one-year-long initiative brings the Municipality and ESAMC together through its Economics undergraduate program, focusing on analyzing the impact that creative businesses have on the city GDP. The aim is to generate a database to guide the formulation of public policies for the sector, contributing to the creation and improvement of companies and entrepreneurs that operate in this segment.

According to the latest Creative Industry Mapping in Brazil, published last February by Firjan Senai, referring to the year 2019, creative GDP represented 2.61% of all wealth generated in Brazil, a total of R$ 171.5 billion, with 837.2 thousand professionals formally employed.
4.8 New Old City Center and Creative Hubs

In order to preserve the Historical City Center, and by bringing development to vulnerable areas through the creative economy, the NEW OLD CITY CENTER Program entails the City Urban Development Plan, the Land Use and Occupation Law and Santos Cultural Heritage Defense Council, which listed more than 1,300 assets for protection, as well as the renewal of the Alegra Centro Law, which provides tax incentives for the restoration of old properties. It is a partnership between the Municipality and civil society.

The Supplementary Law (Santos Criativa), which benefits the Historical City Center, provides up to R$ 6.6 million in tax exemptions, that covers 284 kinds of activities and enables subscription of up to 457 companies in the city. Renovating the old City Market building and turning it into a venue for the various segments of the creative economy will be the focus of investments in the coming years. The building, built in 1902, measures 4,500 m², and offers 54 boxes. The surrounding area was home for the richest and most traditional families in Santos, between the end of 19th century and the beginning of the 20th. However, the commercial and port expansions, new communication and mobility technologies, created a concept of “living well” and, as a result, this high social segment began to move closer to the beach shore.

Objective: To promote the revitalization of the surroundings of the City Market starting from the architectural reformulation of its interior, redefining and reorganizing its uses.

Expected Results:
- Promote urban requalification of Vila Nova neighborhood;
- Create multipurpose rooms inside the City Market, so that trade in antiques, souvenirs, design, crafts, music, literature and gastronomy can be included;
- Creatively requalify entrepreneurs based in the City Market.

Partnerships: Santos City Hall, Universities and private sector.

6.2 Internacional Level

6.2.1 Holding a creative intercities Festival

Following the existing guidelines of UCCN festivals, Santos wants to promote a festival of international scope to intensify the relationship between the Film Cities of the Network, directly benefiting professionals of this segment and its production chain.

6.2.2 Professional Exchange

Interchange Programs for directors and filmmakers for an artistic residency experience, resulting in the creation of an audiovisual product, using the structure and resources of the future Public School of Cinema.

6.3 Estimated Annual Budget for the Implementation of Proposals

In order to accomplish our projects, we will need resources from partnerships with the private sector and with state and federal government agencies, as well as those from the municipality. We will also count on the participation of volunteer work, especially in projects related to Creative Villages.

7. Comunication and Awareness Plan

The Communication Plan for Santos Creative City Film Program includes communication, dissemination and raising awareness actions about audiovisual works which are carried out and received in Santos, as well as detailed information about the fostering initiatives regarding creative economy that take place in the city.

It also informs the media and general public about the interchange and other programs which are carried in partnership with the UNESCO’s World Network of Creative Cities. It is also related to the World Meeting of Creative Cities, an event by UNESCO that will take place for the first time in Latin America and Caribbean, in July 2020 and will be held in Santos.

The dissemination work includes access to information, enabled by digital channels and general media (regional, state and national), about actions related to the Creative City label, with content produced both in text and video formats, as well as the creation of advertisements with standard visual identity for the most diverse applications: print and digital.

It also involves the publication of communication material on the page www.unescosantos2020.org, with primary content related to the label and the International Meeting of Creative Cities, as well as the development of a mobile application to inform the public, tourists and opinion makers about the script of creative activities, both related to the Film segment and other areas of creativity, both developed and received in the city.

Such actions will have a positive impact on the dissemination of information, arousing public interest in the theme and the event, which will be a milestone in Santos history as well as the Baixada Santista Metropolitan Region.
