Meeting to build capacities in Asia-Pacific for the implementation of the Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Diversity of Cultural Expressions

Call for Expression of Interest

Deadline: 5 March 2018

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) is launching a call for expression of interest to solicit specialists from the Asia-Pacific region to join the community of practice on the 2005 Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Diversity of Cultural Expressions (hereinafter “the Convention”).

Targeting mid-career experts, UNESCO will organize a 5-day training in Seoul, Republic of Korea, from 11 to 15 June 2018, with the support of the Korean Government. Its aim will be to share knowledge on the Convention, raise awareness about opportunities from ratifying and implementing the Convention, facilitate networking, encourage future cooperation with UNESCO. Its long-term objective is to bring together a new generation of specialists from Asia-Pacific that can potentially, in future, become part of the Convention’s international Expert Facility and support the implementation UNESCO’s research, capacity development and technical assistance programmes.

Background

Ratified by 145 countries around the world, as well as by the European Union, the 2005 Convention establishes the right of governments to adopt policies and measures to support the emergence of dynamic and strong cultural and creative industry sectors in all countries. Its key message is that artists, cultural professionals and creative practitioners, as well as all citizens, must have the capacity to create, produce, disseminate and enjoy a broad range of cultural goods, services and activities, including their own.

The Convention provides a road map that promote governments and non-governmental actors to work together to achieve four goals: Support sustainable systems of governance for culture; Achieve a balanced flow of cultural goods and services and increase the mobility of artists and cultural professionals; Integrate culture in sustainable development frameworks; Promote human rights and fundamental freedoms.

Fostering the emergence of dynamic cultural sectors, in particular the cultural and creative industries, is increasingly recognized as a priority for sustainable development in the Asia-Pacific region. And yet, the region is the most underrepresented region: out of 146 Parties, only 14 are from this region.

The Convention Secretariat established in 2011 an Expert Facility, which acts as an international pool of highly qualified experts to assist UNESCO in implementing the Convention's programmes around the world. The mandate of the experts is regularly renewed. UNESCO works with the members of the Facility to deliver research services, country-level assistance in different thematic areas of the Convention, etc. through different modalities (workshops, advisory technical assistance, short and long-term capacity-building interventions, mentoring, coaching, etc.).

Experts from the Asia-Pacific region are critically under-represented in the Facility- only three experts are currently from the region. Participating in this training would serve to connect Asia/Pacific specialists with the 2005 Convention who could support the development of new human and institutional capacities, creating a network and community of practice and opening up possibilities for future cooperation with UNESCO and its Field Offices. It is expected that selected participants of this Seoul training could help UNESCO to better address the many demands for information, training, technical assistance.

The implementation of the Convention at the policy and programme level requires the involvement of a wide range of actors. Designing and implementing policies for culture involves in particular the participation of civil society including artists and cultural professionals, academics, other governmental and non-governmental actors dealing with trade, industry development, employment, education, international cooperation, foreign affairs, research, from the cultural sector, as well as the interaction among them.

In this context, building an engaged community of practice of specialists from different policy fields who are knowledgeable about the 2005 Convention is of necessity, in order to reinforce in future the ratification/implementation of the Convention in the region, and to expand regional cooperation possibilities (research, technical assistance, policy advice, etc.). The training, to be facilitated by two members from the Expert Facility, and with the participation of the Secretary of the 2005 Convention, will serve to:

- 1) exchange on the key principles and objectives of the 2005 Convention;
- 2) increase awareness about the benefits of ratifying and implementing the 2005 Convention;
