10 REASONS WE NEED UNIVERSAL ACCESS TO INFORMATION

1. To ensure equal opportunity for all citizens in accessing public information.

2. To enhance government transparency and accountability.

3. To increase access to education and promote lifelong learning.

4. To improve public health by making information on health and safety accessible.

5. To advance research and innovation by providing access to scientific and academic materials.

6. To empower individuals and communities by enabling access to local news and information.

7. To support disaster preparedness and emergency response planning.

8. To foster cultural and artistic expression by providing access to cultural resources.

9. To reduce the digital divide and ensure equal access to the digital world.

10. To support sustainable development and environmental protection by making information on natural resources and environmental issues accessible.
