#MILWeek2016
Rationale

Individuals, communities, and societies are connected today through networks that are both physical and digital. However, across the globe, participation in these "ecosystems of communication" is limited and unequal: not everyone is able to participate in ways that promote intercultural dialogue, inclusion, and social development, nor in ways that enhance democratic processes and peace.

MIL (Media and Information Literacy) provides citizens with essential competencies for life and work in the 21st century. In line with this understanding, UNESCO, Global Alliance for Partnerships on MIL (GAPMIL) and UNAOC believe in the importance of ongoing education and debate about MIL as a means to open, rights-based, secure and inclusive development.

Several questions emerge which underpin this debate: How can alliances among all MIL stakeholders improve and enhance the development of global citizenship, human rights and education? How can MIL work to address such issues as poverty, countering hate speech and preventing violent extremism within societies? What is the role of the public policy in this regard? Can a media and information literate citizenry help to create equitable, inclusive societies? What role can the media, technology and information industries play in achieving these goals?

The UNESCO – UNAOC UNITWIN Universities Media and Information Literacy and Intercultural Dialogue (MILID) Conference and the first General Assembly of the Global Alliance for Partnerships on Media and Information Literacy will respond to these questions. The event will explore the great potential of MIL to enhance new, trans-disciplinary paradigms for intercultural dialogue, human rights, social inclusion, and countering hate speech.

The thrust of different MIL strategies of various organizations is that MIL can contribute to open and inclusive development across the world, and to achieving the U.N. Sustainable Development Goals. These organizations include the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Alliance of Civilization (UNAOC), the World Bank and other UN Organizations, the European Commission, the Council of Europe, the Organization of Economic Co-operation and Development, the Global Alliance for Partnerships on MIL (GAPMIL) and UNESCO-UNAOC University Cooperation Programme on MIL and Intercultural Dialogue (UNITWIN MILID Network), and many other stakeholders.

The purpose of Global MIL Week is to promote MIL connections across educational institutions, organizations, policies, professions, initiatives and nations. The feature event of Global MIL Week is the 6th Conference of the UNESCO-UNAOC UNITWIN MILID Network. The conference this year has been expanded to include the first General Assembly of GAPMIL.

The Global MIL Week 2016 is organised under the theme “Media and Information Literacy: New Paradigms for Intercultural Dialogue”. The tagline being used is MIL-CLICKS (Critical Thinking-Creativity, Literacy, Intercultural Citizenship, Knowledge and Sustainability). MIL-CLICKS will be the nucleus of a social media campaign about non-traditional, creative or innovative ways of learning about MIL and intercultural dialogue by young people, and all citizens, in their normal day-to-day use of all media.

The Conference and General Assembly will, for the first time in Brazil, connect international organizations, universities, associations, research groups and educators, media professionals, information specialists and librarians, policy makers and regulators, NGOs and practitioners in MIL from around the world. The aim is to heighten public awareness of the importance of media and information literacy at a global level while fostering cooperation, mobility and sharing. This year, the event will also highlight artists, journalists, and professionals who work on after-school and community-based MIL programs.

Specifically, the Conference and General Assembly will provide opportunities to develop strategies and policies in the field of MIL which promote intercultural dialogue and social inclusion, and address the social and political challenges related to poverty, conflict and violent extremism, and combating climate change and its impact.

UNESCO will issue a call for papers or presentations for the conference, and a call for the organizations or national, regional, and online initiatives around the world to promote the Global MIL Week. Special invitations for special sessions will also be made. A scientific committee will be involved in reviewing proposals of papers received. The event will provide attendees with networking opportunities, professional development, research visibility, and a venue for celebrating the growth that has occurred under the umbrella of media and information literacy.

To prepare for Global MIL Week, we look forward to a six-month celebration of MIL, beginning in June. Watch the GAPMIL website for news items, announcements, activities and events which explore the conference themes and which will help connect you to individuals and organizations from around the world who share your interests and passion for MIL.

We call on all stakeholders to join in the celebration. Click on Ten Ways to Celebrate MIL Week in 2016 at http://www.unesco.org/new/fileadmin/MULTIMEDIA/HQ/CI/CI/pdf/10_ways_mil_week.pdf. GAPMIL recognizes that in the 21st century, there can be no education for all without Media and Information Literacy for all.

BACKGROUND TO VI MILID CONFERENCE 2016: THE MILID UNESCO UNAOC UNITWIN NETWORK

The International University MILID Network was created to enhance intercultural and cooperative research on MIL and to encourage cross-regional MIL initiatives focusing on issues such as cultural diversity, representation, inclusivity, and peace building.

Working together, over 20 member universities cross cultural barriers and engage in global dialogue and cooperation. Together, the universities promote global research and capacity-building through media and information literacy initiatives that reinforce civic participation through open, free and independent media and information systems that favor intercultural dialogue and cooperation.

Flagship global MIL conferences have taken place in Fez (2011), Barcelona (2012), Cairo (2013), Beijing (2014), and Philadelphia (2015). Each of these meetings was part of a larger global week and conference of researchers, educators, industry professionals, students, policy makers, regulators and NGOs.

The Fez Declaration on Media and Information Literacy, which was the first international declaration to combine both media literacy and information literacy, called to “dedicate a week as world media and information literacy week to highlight to all stakeholders the value of promoting and pursuing MIL throughout the world.” (http://www.unesco.org/new/fileadmin/MULTIMEDIA/HQ/CI/CI/pdf/news/Fez%20Declaration.pdf)

The conference in Brazil continues the tradition established by the MILID network over the past 5 years. The Conference will provide an opportunity to develop and advance collaborative projects such as the MILID Yearbook, a publication highlighting innovative and noteworthy MIL projects around the globe over the past year. Through the efforts of United Nations Education Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Alliance of Civilizations (UNAOC), the Nordic Information Centre for Media and Communication Research (NORDICOM) and the MILID University Network, a MILID Yearbook was published in 2013, 2014 and 2015.

The 2016 MILID Yearbook will be officially released at the conference. For information on the yearbook, please contact Prof. Jagtar Singh, jagtardeep@gmail.com, Department of Library and Information Science, Punjabi University, Patiala (India)

To broaden the reach and impact of MIL initiatives, the Global Alliance on Partnerships for Media and Information Literacy (GAPMIL) was initiated by UNESCO and established in June 2013 in Nigeria. GAPMIL is a groundbreaking initiative to promote international cooperation to ensure that all people have access to critical information, media and digital competencies. The MILID network is the research arm of GAPMIL, together with the GAPMIL research committee. Organizations from over 80 countries have agreed to join forces and stand together for change.

More information on the Global Alliance for Partnerships on Media and Information Literacy is available at http://www.unesco.org/new/en/gapmil. Regional chapters of GAPMIL have been established in Europe, North America, the Arab States, the Pan-African Region, Latin America and the Caribbean, and the Asia-Pacific Region.

PARTNERSHIP WITH THE UNIVERSITY OF
SÃO PAULO

The University of São Paulo (USP) has been involved in the UNESCO-UNAOC MILID University Network since its articulation in Sweden in 2010 and its formal establishment in Morocco in 2011. This is through its Culture and Extension Provost and its School of Arts and Communications. In 2014, USP hosted MILID’s Student Exchange Programme supported by UNESCO. The University has hosted many events in the past, including the groundbreaking International Congress on Education and Communication (1997).

In the field of media and information literacy, this Conference and General Assembly will help the many existing efforts in MIL to reach their full potential through synergies created from exploring different approaches to the field. The Annual Meeting of the Brazilian Association on Educommunication (ABPEducom), as well as the participation of other related associations in journalism, arts, education, information sciences, cinema and audiovisual fields, will contribute important dimensions to the event. Also participating will be Latin American and Caribbean Observatory on MIL (OLCAMI) and a range of Latin American actors who foster education and MIL on the continent.
