Governments can be held accountable, corruption can be exposed.

2. Freedom of Information legislation reflects the fundamental premise that all information held by governments and governmental institutions is in principle public, only withheld if there are legitimate reasons.