Access to information is an integral part of the fundamental right of freedom of expression. It is recognized by Resolution 59 of the UN General Assembly adopted in 1946, as well as by Article 19 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948).